Political relations between Indonesia and Australia Post Australia Tapping Against the State Indonesia (Case Study: Tapping Australia When In Review Of International Law)

This study aims to determine how the views of international law against wiretapping by the government of Australia to the President of the Republic of Indonesia as well as the impact of tapping the diplomatic relations between the two countries. Writing method used by writer is descriptive research type. While data collection techniques that I use is literature. For a discussion of the author's technique the author uses quantitative analysis.

The results showed that the wiretaps were carried Australia to the President of the Republic of Indonesia is not set firmly in international law paa general and regarded as acts that are not illegal, but specifically Australia has hurt the provisions of the Treaty Lombok, especially wiretapping is an act hostile and should not be done between friends 'friends' (an unfriendly act and an act unbecoming among 'fiends'). Strip settlement and not through legal channels but rather through diplomatic channels (diplomatic channel).
