

ABSTRACT

Rona Devi W. (2019). The Role of Foster Parents in Building the Moral Intelligence of Orphanage Children (Case Study in Ciumbuleuit Children's Social Protection Service Unit in Bandung)

This thesis writing aims to find out, describe and learn about the role of foster parents in building the moral intelligence of orphanage children. Moral intelligence is needed to make foster children in the social protection services unit of children successful in everyday life, to build foster children's intelligence it takes the role of foster parents by instilling and implementing moral education from an early age. The research method used is the case study method by collecting observation, interview and documentation data. The research subjects were informants or informants who provided various information needed during the research process. The results showed that the role of foster parents in the social protection services unit of children needed by foster children to be able to improve skills, motivate and foster relationships with others in order to interact properly. The results of the conclusions from the findings and discussion in the field about the role of foster parents in building the moral intelligence of foster children shape the child to be a better person. Through in-depth interviews with informants or informants obtained information that can direct the author to the research objectives. It can be understood that the existence of the Ciumbuleuit Child Social Protection Unit of the City in Bandung the program of building moral intelligence through social guidance conducted by foster parents has an important role in creating a successful future generation of the nation against moral reasoning.

Keywords: orphanage, moral intelligence, the role of foster parents, orphanage children.